Death of Pepin:
Foundation of Papal States.

756 → 1870 AD

After Emperor Constantine recognized Christianity in 313, church land-holdings grew quickly, thanks to donations from the Faithful. In eighth century Pope STEPHEN II - with military help from Charlemagne's father, PEPIN, King of the Franks - used a document bearing Constantine's forged signature to claim a swath of land from Rome to Lorena (on north Adriatic Sea). Called "Patrimony of St. Peter," it was ruled by popes for the next 11 centuries.

756 A.D.

Pipper made his 2nd expedition into Italy, reduced Lombardy to a tributary kingdom, and gave to the pope the territory that the Lombards had recently seized from the Exarchate of Ravenna.

This created the principality of the Papal States which lasted till 1870
